THOUGHT and COMMENT

IT'S SUCH AS THESE
THAT MAKE THE GOING
HARD FOR THOSE WHO DE-SERVE ASSISTANCE OF PUBLIC

Shunted about the world as an outcast, wanted by no community, intently addicted to the use of narcotics, Arthur Reese, escaped convict from the Jefferson City penitentiary in Missouri and "worker" on the sympathies of the public, arrived here to seek the aid of the American Legion on the strength of his war "record".

In the absence of Dr. Edwin Merrihew, county physician, the office nurse directed Reese to Supervisor C. H. Hayden for a temporary and emergency permit to enter the hospital. Dr. Buckman, in sympathy for the man who had not yet been investigated administered to him to quiet his nerves pending the arrival of the next morning.

Dr. John L. Reid, contract officer for the American Legion here. Meanwhile B. E. Stotts, president of the Allied Council, and Jack Connolly, commander of the American Legion, spent considerable time to start the wheels in motion to get Reese into the Livermore hospital. Failing to get another "nervous quietener" at the hospital Reese took "French leave" there and avoiding those who had befriended him before poured his tale of woe into the ears of W. F. Davis, secretary of the Retailers Credit Association.

About that time Marshal C. H. Palmer was called in and after a few questions, Palmer trapped Reese in several false statements. Becoming suspicious the persons interested launched a real investigation which resulted in discovery that Reese escaped from the Jefferson City prison in June, 1920, when he and a companion killed in the break killed one of the guards and shot their way to freedom with guns which had been smuggled into the prison in loaves of French bread. Reese today bears the scars of the bullet wound received in the prison break.

Chief of Police Drew of Oakland confirmed the report that the prison authorities did not want Reese, only to have him die on their hands and for the past six years Reese has traveled about in nearly every instance on money or free transportation given him to get out of the community.

That's what happened to him here Friday night when Palmer, Identification Expert J. W. Smiley and deputies in the Sheriff's office after ascertaining to their satisfaction that Reese had not committed a crime here and was not sought by other officers, sent him on his way via the Martinez-Benicia ferry.

THREE HURT IN STRIKE RIOT IN SAN FRANCISCO

Six are Arrested Following Clashes of Union and Non-Union Men on Streets

SAN FRANCISCO, May 4.—Three men were severely injured yesterday and six arrests were made in outbursts as the result of the carpenters' strike.

Shortly before noon yesterday, police responded to a riot call at a new hotel under construction on Taylor street between Ellis and O'Farrell streets and were told by the foreman there that 150 men had attacked fifteen non-union men employed on the work. One of the men was struck on the head by a hammer, another was knocked down and a third was injured during the fight.

Another riot call summoned the police, who were searching for the union men, to Ellis and Jones street. A crowd of men estimated at 100 were crowded in front of a building under course of construction by non-union men. The crowd was dispersed and no arrests were made.

A few minutes later another call was made to the police from a (Continued on Page Five)

R. R. CROSSING IS AUTHORIZED

What is believed to be a record in hearings before the California State Railroad commission was established yesterday morning when Commissioner Clyde Seavey granted the Santa Fe railroad a permit to cross Cutting boulevard with a grade crossing after eleven minutes of testimony. The majority of this time was taken up with a description of the work to be done.

The recommendation of A. G. Mott, transportation engineer of the commission that the Santa Fe be granted a permit with the proviso that the railroad may extend the time further if traffic at that time does not demand a separated crossing with the commission retaining the privilege to order a separated crossing when going 50-60 on the cost, came as a complete but pleasant surprise to the city officials in attendance.

Platt Kent who represented the Santa Fe, concurred in the recommendation of Mott and City Attorney T. M. Carlson, speaking for the city council of Richmond, also approved the recommendation.

Gwyn H. Baker, attorney for the Richmond Navigation and Improvement company, was also in attendance. (Continued on page 4)

Senate Rejects White Radio Bill

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, May 4.—Rejecting the White radio bill, providing for strict regulation of radio by the Secretary of Commerce, which passed the House by a large majority the Senate Interstate Commerce committee today tentatively agreed to report the bill which would vest complete control in a five man commission.

Formal approval on two minor amendments which will probably be included in the bill.

The type of commission proposed by the measure was recently frowned on by President Coolidge, who looks with disfavor on the creation of commissions independent of the Executive branch of the government.

Opposition to the White bill, which the committee rejected, was based on the ground that it would place too much power in the hands of one man.

British Life Is Upset By Huge Strike

Makeshift Means of Transportation and Bobbies Help to Keep Wheels Turning

(By Universal Service)

LONDON, May 4.—The pulse of the Empire throbbed strongly the first day of the great general strike, and there was every evidence today in London that the people as a whole are facing the crisis with serenity and a determination to meet the possibilities of the situation courageously.

When wearing lounge suits and "Oxford bags" ran a fifteen minute electric train service to and from the Northwestern suburbs, and trains were operated hourly on the other subways, with a promise by the companies that the services will gradually be extended as the volunteer force expands.

The police today performed prodigies in maintaining order among the most amazing welter of traffic ever seen on the streets of London. During the morning they were not called upon to cool the endless streams of vehicles of every description that jammed the main arteries of travel during the morning and evening when the city's millions moved to and from work.

From the viewpoint of the ordinary man the first day of the strike was above everything a triumph for the famous London bobbies. Tens of thousands of the "white collar brigade," shop girls, waitresses and stenographers, started for the city from the suburbs in their own automobiles, motor coaches, trucks and on bicycles, and as they approached the center of the city the vehicles merged into swirling rivers of traffic.

LABORERS IN ITALY HAVE WAGE RAISE

Despatches from many parts of Italy report the signing of wage agreements by Fascist employers' organizations with gas and electrical workers, tailors, carpenters, shoemakers, musicians, farm day laborers and other Fascist trades unions. All wages have been advanced on account of the high cost of living.

STRIKE MAY EFFECT U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—President Coolidge today instructed the members of his cabinet to make a comprehensive survey to determine at once the possible effect of the British strike upon American business.

Grave fears were held in official circles today over the effect of prolonged strike may have upon both the export and import trade of the United States.

The United States is doing an unusual business in excess of $1,500,000,000 direct with the United Kingdom, exclusive of the British colonial possessions. That is in excess of one-fifth of this country's entire foreign trade. It is much greater than the business done with any other nation.

Latest figures compiled by the Department of Commerce showed today that Great Britain bought nearly $68,000,000 of American products in March, and that the total of exports to Great Britain was $728,000,000 for the nine months ended March 31.

The United States imported $37,000,000 of British products in March. Total imports for the nine months ended on March 31, were valued at $322,000,000.

Held For Taking Shot at Neighbor

Jose Aranda is being held in the Richmond city prison for the San Pablo authorities and will face a charge of assault with deadly weapon before Justice of the Peace today. Aranda is being held in lieu of $1,000 bail on the charge of San Vaughn of San Pablo who charges that Aranda fired at him a number of times Monday night with a revolver.

According to Manuel Moltoza, constable of San Pablo who made the arrest yesterday morning Vaughn reported the shooting Monday night but he was told by Mrs. Aranda and neighbors that Aranda had gone to work earlier in the evening and had not returned. Investigation yesterday morning according to Moltoza developed the fact that Aranda had not been at work and the warrant and arrest followed.

According to Moltoza the two families have been quarreling over the raising of some children and last night shortly before midnight when Vaughn was leaving for work he charged he was fired upon a number of times by Aranda. Vaughn stated that he had noticed a prowler around his house on Monday night and that he now believes it was Aranda who was "laying" for him.

BOTH SIDES REFUSE TO GIVE WAY

Strike is Costing Government Quarter of a Billion a Week Is Estimate

By S. H. STANSBURY

(By Universal Service)
LONDON, May 4.—Britain's great industrial strike in twenty-four hours has become a spending shadow that threatens to darken the whole life of the nation.

The movement initiated by the major Labor Unions through representatives in the trades union congress in sympathy with the coal miners, is rapidly absorbing other organizations.

The cost to the nation is estimated unofficially by bankers and treasury statisticians at $250,000,000 a week in loss of revenues, wages, depreciation of profits from production, and cost of protective measures. This entails a certain increase in the income tax of a shilling in the pound, or twenty per cent, if the strike lasts only a week or ten days. The cost will mount progressively as the strike continues.

Both sides of the controversy estimate the duration of the strike at not less than a fortnight. The danger in the situation is the apparent stolid stubbornness of both sides.

The government's attitude is that if the subsidy to the coal industry is again surrendered to the pressure being brought, the days of majority rule in England are ended. That epitomizes the demand of the unions and it is being interpreted to the public by the government as a direct threat against national institutions which must be resisted with iron endurance.

More than 4,000,000 workers have laid down their implements, although the strike is only a day old there is no sign of an early ending.

The British government again tonight advised the trades union congress in charge of the strike on behalf of British labor, that there will be no negotiations. (Continued On Page 8)

Alien Bootleggers Will Be Deported

(By Universal Service)
SAN FRANCISCO, May 4.—Aliens arrested for bootlegging will be turned over to the immigration authorities for deportation, it was announced today by Prohibition Director Ned Green.

Green announced that he had received orders from Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to instruct Federal agents to question and determine the status of every alien arrested for law violations.

Aliens turned over to the immigration authorities will be charged with conspiracy to violate the laws for the United States.

Heretofore the immigration authorities have questioned aliens who were held in jail in default of bail. Under the new order, Green and his agents will question every alien and determine his status before permitting the accused to secure bail.

Fear of deportation, in the opinion of Prohibition agents, will stem the bootlegging activities of aliens.

RAIMENT AND MORALS

A string of pearls a little red hat and bobbed hair do not unfit a mother to have custody of her children, a Kansas City judge has recently decided.

The question arose when a mother applied to the court to get back her three children, who had been placed in a Mennonite home, where they had absorbed the ideas of the sect regarding raiment. They told the court that they had grave doubts that a woman who bobbed her hair and wore a little red hat and a string of pearls could be a good mother—and they quoted the scripture to support their contention.

The judge took a more liberal view of the matter. The decision he announced, with respect to cut of hair and millinery as determinators of moral fitness for motherhood, will possibly disconcert some of those who make a business of meddling in the domestic affairs of others; but when bobbed hair is the rule rather than the exception, as it is in this country today, a bobbed head under a little red hat is quite as likely to know the difference between right and wrong as an unbobbed head under a poke bonnet. A mother's love for her children and her tender and sympathetic understanding of their needs are inward and spiritual graces of which the kind of hat she wears is not necessarily the outward sign.

COOLIDGE-MELLON WIN

The administration scored another positive and exceedingly impressive victory in securing the ratification of the Italian and French debt settlements. Up to the time the vote was taken on the former, the administration was counting on only a 15-vote margin. The recorded vote gave a clear victory of 21 majority. This increased vote is a tribute of respect and confidence to the President and Mr. Mellon and his associates on the Debt Funding Commission.

At a time when the balance of foreign trade was running against us, when we were importing more than we were exporting, the failure to ratify the debt agreement would most certainly have had far-reaching effects. It will be surprising if as a result of the ratification we do not secure at once an increased purchasing activity in general, and in Italy in particular, as a result of the acceptance of the pact which enables the Italians to continue the work of putting their financial house in order.

LESSON OF PRISONS

What to do with empty prisons has become an annoying problem in Great Britain. Since the war twenty-five jails have been converted to other uses and the authorities still have twenty-one on their hands. The decrease in the prison population of Great Britain in the past twelve years has been so marked that nearly one-half the prisons in the country have been closed for want of tenants. The prison population of the United States has noticeably increased during the same period. A variety of causes doubtless is responsible for this remarkable difference, in the crime movements in the two countries; but the fact that the United States has adopted nationwide prohibition, while Great Britain has not, should not be overlooked.

INDEPENDENCE

The British gave up the contest not long after the American victory at Yorktown. At the opening of Parliament in 1782 the king, in a voice choked with emotion, announced that he was ready to acknowledge the independence of the United States. At the close of his speech George III said that it was his earnest prayer that "religion, language, interest and affection might prove a bond of permanent union between the two countries."

A final treaty of peace between England and this country was signed at Paris in 1783. It secured to us the thirteen states, with Maine, and the territory that reached west of them to the Mississippi, in all over 800,000 square miles of territory. John Adams of Massachusetts was our first minister to England, and the king was very gracious to him at first. "Sir," said the king, "I will be very free with you, I was the last to consent to the separation, but the separation having been made, I have always said, as I say now, that I would be the first to meet the friendship of the United States as an independent power." Later, however, the king treated Adams very coldly.

America had won her independence, but she had not secured harmony and union. The states had fought like brothers during the war, and now they threatened to fall apart. Someone compared them to a barrel made of thirteen stout staves, but without a single hoop to hold them together. Under the Articles of Confederation or Constitution adopted in 1781, the nation had no President—no definite head. It had a Congress, it is true, but that Congress was destitute of power. It might pass laws, but it could not compel the people to obey them. It might ask for soldiers to defend the country, but it could not draft them.

And then the states began quarrelling with each other about boundary lines, commerce and trade. They were not a united and friendly people anymore; they were getting to be thirteen hostile nations.

IV. ESCAROLE.

Escarole is a broad-leaved variety of endive. It is received in the New York market from the trucking sections of the Eastern states in much larger quantities than is the ordinary endive. Escarole is valuable for its health-giving qualities and is frequently cooked and served like spinach. The leaves are thick, broad and more or less twisted and waved. They are a bright, dark green, with a whitish mid-rib. The inner leaves form a loose head which blanches a creamy white. Escarole forms an appetizing salad and may be gathered well into the winter.

SIMPLE AND LOVELY MOTIFS FOR CURTAINS AND VALANCES

The Charm of These Designs Will Make Needleworkers Anxious to Develop and Use Them

By MONA MULLEN

SOON one's thoughts will be turning to the house and its needs to get it in order for Fall and Winter. Curtains are always an important consideration, and even women who do not keep house on an extensive scale often find many uses for pretty curtains.

Any number of attractive fabrics may be used for the curtains and valance pictured. Scrim is always pretty and serviceable and there are plain fade-proof materials that are not expensive and, at the same time lend themselves congenially to all the latest forms of decoration.

No. 12041—Curtains and a Valance May Be Trimmed with These Motifs.

The transfer furnishes designs for two pairs of curtains and a valance for one. The motifs are so adaptable that one can omit several parts without detracting from their beauty. If the curtains are used for the kitchen, nursery or bath-room, naturally they would be less ornamental.

The flowers may be worked in blue, pink, yellow, and lavender, with yellow and black centers. The leaves and stems are most effective in green, of course. The scallops are pretty outlined with a double line of blue and black.

For the butterfly motifs nothing could be prettier than blue and yellow, with antennae of brown or black. The butterflies are worked among flowers that are embroidered in old rose, while the stems are in green. Lazy-daisy, outline, running, and one-stitches are employed and, as every needlewoman knows, there are no simpler stitches in needlework, nor are there any that can be combined with more exquisite results.

investigating committee. All this time Senator Steck was deprived of a voice in the senate to which his colleagues have tardily decided he was entitled. The senate's delay in handling the Steck-Brookhart case resulted in injustice to one man and embarrassment to another. Surely the senate has recently had sufficient experience with challenged or contested seats to be able to deal with such matters more promptly.

Why Girls Go Back Home

BY CATHARINE BRODY

Copyright 1926 by Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

"Why Girls Go Back Home" with Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner production from this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Marie Downey, innocently involved in scandal by Clifford Dudley, an actor, climbs to stardom because of the notoriety. For three years she lives a gay life with Sally, her chum. Then she invites Clifford to her birthday party and makes a fool of him in front of the guests. John, a former sweetheart, comes to see her unannounced, confronts her at this moment, and tells her she is known in her home town as a prostitute. She resolves to "show the town up," and goes home.

CHAPTER XII—(Continued)

He dragged her up the back stairs and did not loose his hold until Marie stood in her own room, which was, she noticed absently, untouched.

"Father," Marie had been treating all the way up the stairs, "what's the rush all about? What's the matter?"

But Joseph Downey did not answer till he had shut the door of her room. Then he groaned and wiped his forehead.

"Are you mad? This'll ruin me, I tell you. The minister is coming to see you. He called me this morning. He said he was going to preach a sermon about you. Oh, Lord, what have I done that you should humble me so? My own daughter! Why, the Klan'll get you, Marie. You'll be run out of town and me with you—and me with you!"

"It's you who are mad, I should say," remarked Marie with composure. "You aren't a bit glad to see me, are you? You'd like me to take the next train back, wouldn't you?"

Joseph Downey saw light ahead. "Will you, Marie? That's what you should do. I'm telling you for your own good."

"Unless you throw me out, father," said Marie, "I have no intention of leaving this hotel. And if you throw me out, I'll go and find another place to stay until I feel like leaving this town. There!"

Mr. Downey wrung his hands.

"But why have you come home? You're getting along well in New York. It's mad, I tell you."

Marie only looked at him inscrutably.

"Yes, so everyone tells me," she sighed. "It's no good prolonging our greetings, is it father? We're not very successful at it, are we? And I'm tired."

"But what'll I do about the minister? And how did he know you were coming home, Marie? Have you done anything wrong—again?"

"The minister? Oh, I sent him a telegram. And don't do anything about him. You wouldn't have me refuse to see a minister, would you?"

"You—you sent him a telegram!" marvelled Mr. Downey, and the strangeness of this lovely and self-possessed and perfectly-groomed young woman who was his daughter penetrated to him in full force. She would not look at him, principally because her eyes were full of tears. She only waved her hand impatiently, and Mr. Downey retreated, shaking his head, and groaning occasional groans.

"It's not so easy," reflected Marie gloomily, sitting down on the small, narrow bed. She looked about the room, trying to remember how it had been part of home to her. There was a bright calendar which she had stuck up on the wall ages ago. And there were high school pictures. And there was a snapshot of John in front of her store, which she had taken. And there was another snapshot of John and herself, his arm about her waist, as someone had snapped them to the accompaniment of much laughter and teasing. My goodness! How badly the barber had cut her hair in those days. It was a few minutes before Mr. Downey came back, this time in high excitement.

"Marie! It's the minister's wife. She wants you on the telephone. What do you think it's for?"

"I know what it's for," said Marie impatiently. "For goodness sake, don't fuss so, father. You'll drive me crazy."

The telephone was out in the hall. The voice of the minister's wife was a sweet whine, oh, so ingratiating.

"I know you must be tired, Marie—I know you won't mind an old friend calling you Marie, though you are so rich and famous—I know you must be tired, but we simply felt, you having done so much for Winesville, that we couldn't let your first day home pass without welcoming you back. I called up the Ladies' Aid Society members, and they feel just the same way about it, seeing how much you've done for us. So we thought we'd have a little gathering at my house tonight, just a little gathering. Just to welcome you home."

"That's so good of you," said Marie just as sweetly.

"Oh, no! It's you who're good to us. I can't tell you how Mr. Parsons appreciates it. He'll tell you so himself. He meant to come and see you, but I said no, the poor child's spent a day on the train, she must want to rest. And so we'll see you at the little gathering, and we'll be so glad to see you. I'd call on you myself this morning, but you know, I'll be so busy cooking, and I guess you'll appreciate some home cooked food for a change. New Yorkers don't get that anyway, do they, Marie?"

"What does she want you for?" agonized Mr. Downey, as Marie hung up the receiver.

"It's just a little gathering she's giving for me tonight," Marie informed him sweetly.

"Mrs. Parsons is giving — for you!" gasped Mr. Downey.

Marie turned on him with pity.

"You might as well know, father, that this town is out to kill the fatted calf for me, or the fatted chicken, or the fatted pig, or the fatted lamb, or the fatted anything. Mr. Parsons wrote me about the fund for building what they call the social extension to the church. So I wired him that I would give five thousand dollars. And you see how Winesville bleats. Five thousand dollars!" whispered Mr. Downey. "Have you got so much money, Marie?"

"Oh, father! And don't ask me where I got it, which you're going to do in a minute. I earned it all, every bit of it, with my little voice, and my little legs, and my little dimple. Imagine the profits of a leg show going to build an extension to the church. It's killing! Oh, if Sally were only here."

Squashing her little travelling hat down over her sleek head, she walked, still with that ironic smile about her lips, out into Main Street. Her objective was the Rose Department Store. This time, there was no loitering near the window, hoping that John would come out. Marie proceeded haughtily along the aisle to where John stood, rooted to the spot.

"How do you do, John," said Marie politely.

He could only swallow and nod.

"Are you going to be at the gathering tonight? I expect you, you know. It's my honor."

A pious flush rose to his cheeks.

"Don't go, Marie. I can't bear it. They only want to stare at you. They'll say nasty things to you—about you."

Marie threw back her head and laughed.

"Come and see. They'll be as sweet as sugar pie to me. They won't dare be otherwise. I've new shoes and I mean to wear my most Parisian gown."

"Oh, please, Marie, I couldn't bear it for you. I guess you know. I haven't slept for thinking what I said to you. I—I guess I was too worked up."

"I said I'd show you," said Marie sternly. "Now you must come and see. All you hypocrites, father and you, too, you'll see how Winesville takes me to its bosom, hateful town I never want to see it again!"

"Then why—why did you come back?" begged John. "Just to torture me?"

Marie shrugged.

"Oh, you flatter yourself. Why does any girl come back home when she succeeds? To show off!"

She walked out with a good imitation of carefree indifference. But she knew it was not true.

The very moment when, arriving a little late, as was proper, Marie stepped into the Parsons' crowded parlor, to her most Parisian evening dress, she had tasted the full sweetness of her revenge.

John needn't have been concerned about the dress, for it was so Parisian in its extreme modesty of chiffon that none in Winesville could detect the subtleties of that modesty.

REAL NEW YORK IS FILM THEME AT CALIFORNIA

Have you ever been to New York? If so, have you ever looked into it? By this is meant, not quick views of the Museum of Natural History, the "Automat," or the Statue of Liberty, but—rather such things as Broadway at night, with its lights, and well-dressed throngs. Not the flower—but Park Avenue, with its sleek motors and uniformed chauffeurs. Not the concert halls—but the theatres—and, pretty girls. Not cheap dance hall—but the cabarets and night clubs. Not the glare of the street hurdy-gurdy, but the strains of a symphonic jazz band. Not the "one dollar" pool necklaces—but the glitter of diamonds. If you haven't been there, perhaps you've dreamt about going. Well—it's all coming to you. Because in "Dancing Mothers," the new Paramount picture, coming to the California Theatre today, the fast side and fast set of Gotham are portrayed with vividness and truth.

You'll see them all—and revel in it! Conway Tearle, Alice Joyce and Clara Bow are co-stars in this moving drama, which was directed by Herbert Brenon. Forrest Halsey adapted it from the Selwyn Selwyn-Golding stage success. "Dancing Mothers" played to crowded houses on Broadway for almost a year. Other features on the same program include "Wandering Papas," a Clyde Cook comedy; "Marvels in Motion," "International News," Novelty reels and Larry Canelo, at the organ.

To Bed by Compass is Insomnia Cure

(By Universal Service)

PARIS, May 4.—Go to bed by the compass, if you wish to cure insomnia. This is the advice of French scientists who have discovered that human beings sleep soundest if lying with their heads to the north and their feet to the south.

The experiments have been continued intermittently since 1908, when Monsieur Georges Girard, a chemist, reported that he suffered intercostal neuralgia whenever he slept lying in an east-west direction. As soon as he placed his head in a north-south line the pains ceased and he slept better.

"Polar forces influence the body even when eating," advise the French physicians.

dance to assist the attorneys for Richmond and Santa Fe, in what was expected to be a hard battle to obtain the permission for the grade crossing.

Information from reliable sources several days ago indicated that the commission engineers would demand a separate crossing for the spur.

In making his recommendation, Mott asked for the installation of two automatic signal flags at the crossing.

F. D. Kinnel, division construction engineer of the Santa Fe was the only one called to the witness stand by Commissioner Seavey and his testimony was confined to an indication of the route of the proposed spur from the main line of the Santa Fe to the Inner Harbor Wharf.

Representatives of Richmond who were in attendance at the meeting yesterday included: Mayor W. W. Scott, City Manager J. A. McVittie and Councilmen E. J. Garrard, George Black, and Mrs. Marie Osborn and Mrs. J. H. Chandler.

The hearing was dispatched with such speed that a group of Richmond people, who were planning to attend the session to assist in presenting the case to the commission did not arrive until some time after the permit had been granted.

Barthelmess Introduces New Leading Lady

Film fans will be interested to see Richard Barthelmess' new leading lady, Lois Moran, who will play opposite him in "Just Suppose," which opens at the Richmond Theatre today.

Little Miss Moran is only sixteen years old. After playing in one or two pictures abroad she made her American screen debut in "Sierra Dallas," in which she scored an instantaneous and remarkable success.

In "Just Suppose," she appears as a sweet aristocratic child of the South who falls in love with the very handsome and romantic Prince of "Koronia," played by Richard Barthelmess.

Other features on the same program include "Don't Pinch," a comedy screen, featuring Bobby Vernon; "Trizma," the screen magazine.

British Life Upset By Huge Strike

extreme confusion, but somehow the policemen, with upraised arms, sorted out the confusion and got the vehicles on their way.

At Trafalgar Square, Hyde Park corner, a few dozen privately owned and operated buses, which their place was filled ten fold by automobiles, took to the streets, their dating back to the infancy of the new automobiles industry.

Some hours of the day, in thoroughfare as the Strand and Whitehall, there was not an inch of road space unoccupied by vehicles. Yet the police kept the stream slowly rolling, and London's transport problem was partially solved. Leading firms made their own arrangements to bring their staffs to offices and stores in cars, trucks and motor coaches.

Huge trucks commandeered by the government bore food to every part of the capital, and no shortage was reported in any district. Business men left their country homes and took to the streets in west end hotels, but on the other hand there was a big exodus of visitors. There was a more marked flight of Americans to the continent today than was evident yesterday. Nearly two hundred persons were seen to board the White Star liner Majestic for New York.

The sidewalks of London were more crowded today than usual, mainly owing to the fact that knots of strikers walked peacefully about, surveying the traffic congestion. Thousands of idle men and women gathered in Whitehall and Piccadilly, and the Parliament building, but here at least they indulged in no demonstrations.

Fleet street, which is the center of the printing trade, was heavily picketed. All the newspaper offices in the neighborhood were closed down, with gates and doors barred and bolted, although within editors were gathered awaiting developments and reading the news from tickers which continued to operate.

At noon came the report that the government had commandeered the Morning Post plant with the intention of producing its own newspaper, "The British Gazette." A wireless call was sent out to volunteer workers, with a promise of protection from the strikers, and the response was ample. Organization of a distributing system for the newspaper presented a serious problem which was tackled this afternoon.

The upturn business life of the city began to fade this evening. It can be said that the wonderful machine of London's activities worked creakingly, but it worked. There was little grumbling about the discomforts the people underwent.

They were somewhat stimulated to cheerfulness by a typical English spring day, in which frequent spells of bright sunshine broke through dull skies.

Night brought its own problems and deep concern to all who enter to the public's entertainment. The theatres and moving picture houses were badly hit. They were half empty because of the inability of their usual patrons to get home comfortably. The managers have not yet agreed upon a general closing down, although they are

Typewriter and Telephone Lead Fifty Years of World Progress

Sesqui-Centennial to Show Revolution Begun by Two Devices First Seen in 1876 at Centennial.

By GEORGE H. JASON

WHEN the world comes to Philadelphia this summer to celebrate one hundred and fifty years of American independence and progress, the picture of how far we have come in a century and a half will be hardly less amazing than that covering the past half century alone.

The crowds which flocked to the Centennial Exposition in 1876 and saw evidences of what a century had brought forth under the world's newest civilization, had only the slightest intimations of the fruits of American genius that were to ripen in half that time in the future.

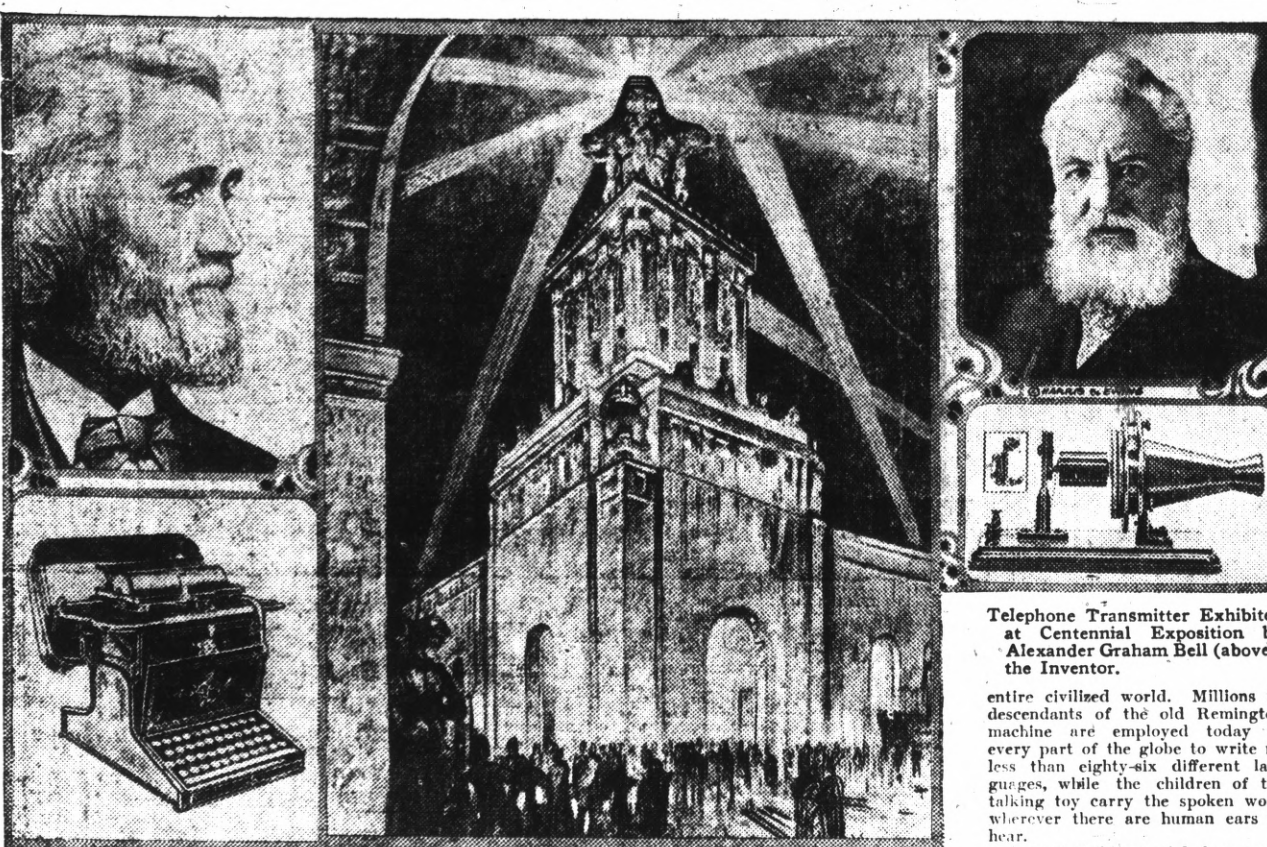

What our fathers and grandfathers, in their quaint linen dusters, saw at the Centennial were largely the results of a hundred years of political progress.

At the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition this year, however, will be seen the evidences of an industrial, mechanical and commercial revolution of which no one dreamed fifty years ago, for there had been nothing like it in the world before.

Practically our whole modern mechanical civilization—electricity, typewriters, telephones, phonographs, automobiles, linotypes—to say nothing of airplanes and radio—has developed in the half century between the Centennial and Sesqui-Centennial Expositions.

Of all this, only the slightest suggestions were given to visitors to the first national exposition, of 1876. Chief of these were two new devices, designed to increase facility of intercommunication between men, the typewriter and the telephone, shown there to the world for the first time. Even the inventors of these two revolutionary mechanisms, Christopher Latham Sholes and Alexander Graham Bell, could hardly have had more than the faintest vision of the enormous influence that would flow from their works, or how, within fifty years, they would completely revolutionize the entire commercial world and become essential factors of modern life.

At the Centennial in 1876 were shown the single prototypes of the typewriter and the telephone. At the Sesqui-Centennial they will be seen by the hundreds, in every booth, as instruments brought as near to perfection as the interval has permitted. For the Sesqui-Centennial authorities have chosen the direct descendant of the Sholes' model as the official typewriter of the exposition, the linotype, adding machine, cyclo register, and many other time and labor-saving devices for the business and professional world.

The improvement of these two machines in the past half century has, of course, been astounding.

From the ornate, cumbersome, writing machine which the Remingtons showed at the Centennial and which may still be seen in their historical collection in New York, has come the tabulating, visible, portable, noiseless and electrical typewriters, and, suggested by the Sholes' invention, the linotype, adding machine, cyclo register, and many other time and labor-saving devices for the business and professional world.

From the little box-like toy connected by a wire to another one, in a distant part of the building, enabling two persons separated by this short space to hear each other's voices, has been developed the modern instrument, which makes it possible this year for a visitor to the Sesqui-Centennial to talk with those he has left at home in San Francisco, New York, New Orleans, Toronto, or almost any other place in North America.

Moreover, in the interval between the two expositions, these two machines have spread throughout the entire civilized world. Millions of descendants of the old Remington machine are employed today in every part of the globe to write no less than eighty-six different languages, while the children of the talking toy carry the spoken word wherever there are human ears to hear.

A most striking social change, the economic independence of women, is due in great part to the development of the typewriter and the telephone, which have afforded dignified and sustaining employment to millions of typists and switchboard operators.

Who shall say to what extent the high estate of the modern independent woman is due to the inventions of Sholes and Bell? Who can measure in years the time saved to humanity, since the Centennial Exposition, through the substitution of writing machines for the pen, or who can estimate the sum of human gain made possible by the instrument which enabled men's voices to disregard distance as a barrier to speech?

Kansas Questions Use of Bible in Schools in State

(By Universal Service)

VINA LINDSAY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 4.—This city's controversy over whether the Bible should be taught literally from cover to cover in the Sunday schools, reached its climax in a debate staged by a Liberal and Fundamentalist at the Forum of the Linwood Christian Church here recently.

"David and Solomon did things that would ostracize them if they were alive today," said Dr. Clarence Reidenbach, Congregationalist minister, who spoke in behalf of the Liberals. "And yet we are expected to believe God would take the responsibility for every word these men wrote and make such words infallible through the ages."

Dr. D. B. Gregory, Presbyterian minister, who represented the Fundamentalists, issued a challenge to the modernists to "supply a better constitution for church and state than the Bible and to present a valid argument against the infallibility of the book."

A recent statement by Dr. Reidenbach to the effect that the Ten Commandments should be revised led to the debate.

In his debate Dr. Reidenbach brand as "Biblical fallacies" such doctrines as baptism by immersion, miracles, explosive conversion, the necessity of church membership for salvation, the substitution theory of atonement and the theory that faith means "swallowing a lot of medieval theology."

These are important doctrines and all Biblical scholars know it," he said. "It is time that the people had a chance to find it out. Nobody believes that God ever took his pen in hand and wrote the Bible from cover to cover."

Dr. Gregory termed the Bible the constitution of the church and the charter of liberty for all men. The welfare of the nation as well as of the church, he said, depended upon its being accepted as the word of God.

Mayfair to Go Treasure Hunting

By ROBERT J. PREW

LONDON, May 4.—Mayfair is preparing to go treasure-hunting again. For the past few seasons hostesses have organized all-night searches for treasure, using cryptic clues and sending their guests questing over large sections of London. Now on the eve of another season many expeditions are being planned with novel variations.

Lady Eleanor Smith, daughter of Lord Birkenhead and the leader of a brilliant coterie of the younger set, has devised paper-chases with automobiles for week-end parties. Two members lay the trial and leave signs in the different streets. The chase ends at the house of a friend, where supper is served and dancing takes place.

Mrs. Jimmie Corrigan, who has returned to her Grosvenor Street residence, and Mrs. Benjamin Guinness are hostesses whose novel parties are the joy of each season, and they are hoping that the Prince of Wales will be able to share in them as he has done in the past.

Surprise parties are greatly in vogue. Simple games like "hunt the slipper" or "hide the thimble" from part of the surprises.

Germany Fails In Effort to Restore Colors

(By Universal Service)

BERLIN, May 4.—A situation which might easily develop into a cabinet and even a presidential crisis has suddenly been precipitated through an effort to restore the old imperial colors, black, white and red to the German embassy and consulates abroad.

The change was to have been announced by President Von Hindenburg in a speech at Hamburg tonight and was to have been followed tomorrow by a presidential order which already has been signed and sealed and countersigned by Chancellor Luther, but the Democrats and Centerists who are stout Republicans got wind of the project at the last moment and immediately threatened to bolt from the cabinet if the change should be carried through.

Under the pressure of this threat President Von Hindenburg and Chancellor Luther bowed for the moment and the projected announcement was omitted.

building at 322 Battery street. Upon the complaint of James Devlin, 41 Jones street, a union carpenter who charged that a score of men in automobiles searched for him and attempted to assault him, Frank Smith, 425 Schrader street was charged with battery and Jack Smith, Mission auto park, with disturbing the peace.

Martin Grab, a non-union carpenter was attacked while working on a building at Fell and Franklin streets early in the morning. The non-union men were driven from the job.

Two union and one non-union carpenters were arrested following an argument during which it is alleged one of the union men attempted to take an iron bar away from the non-union worker.

A supervisors committee has been appointed by Mayor Rolph to investigate the strike situation and to endeavor to perfect a settlement between the union workers and employers. A preliminary hearing of the committee is scheduled to be held today.

Annual Mother and Daughter Banquet At 1st Presbyterian

The annual mother and daughter banquet held by the First Presbyterian church last night was one of the most successful affairs that the church has ever held. The men of the church prepared and served the banquet, under the direction of Dr. W. W. Giberson.

The room was beautifully decorated with roses, while at each plate a bouquet of carnations was placed.

Mrs. Carl Alexander presided at the banquet and at this time the mothers introduced their daughters.

Miss Mildred Spires gave one of the best expressed talks of the evening in her "Tribute to the Mothers."

Mrs. Henry Engleking in reply gave "Tribute to the Daughters." The program consisted of songs by Mrs. Clyde Wilson, Mrs. Emily Axtelle of the high school, was the chief speaker of the evening and her talk was appropriate to the occasion.

Another beautiful event, staged was the "Loving picture" Mrs. Annette Beale was seen sitting in a chair, a B/E in her hands while about her a gold frame was placed and different lights played upon her. At this time Mrs. W. P. Cooper and Robertha Baird sang, "My Mother's Bible."

Plates were laid for over a hundred and the event from all angles, was a complete success.

Strike May Effect U. S.

He found that the strike was of such brief duration as to have had little or no effect at present upon American commerce. He was informed that Great Britain has made arrangements for large purchases of foodstuffs in this country and that the shipping arrangements are being completed without difficulty. The United States ships vast amounts of raw cotton to the British textile centers and he found that thus far none of the orders had been curtailed or cancelled.

He believes that there is absolutely no relationship between the strike and American labor conditions.

The assumption that President Coolidge had placed a ban upon all statements by cabinet officials that would possibly interrupt harmonious relations with the British government during the strike was made at the close of the cabinet meeting.

Secretary of Labor Davis, who had been quoted earlier as saying that the British miners were entitled to an increased wage, declined to comment at the close of today's cabinet meeting.

When asked for his views, he smilingly remarked, "better ask Mr. Kellogg." The secretary of State will be in charge of any relations between the two governments during the strike crisis.

The administration will do its best to prevent any interruption of shipping from this country during the strike. A complete breakdown of ocean transportation would cripple many American business industries, it is felt.

From a political viewpoint, the cabinet officials feel that Great Britain has reached its greatest crisis, since the war.

"If this strike lasts for any considerable time, Britain cannot survive" one of the cabinet officers said.

Miss Mildred Spires gave one of the best expressed talks of the evening in her "Tribute to the Mothers."

Mrs. Henry Engleking in reply gave "Tribute to the Daughters." The program consisted of songs by Mrs. Clyde Wilson, Mrs. Emily Axtelle of the high school, was the chief speaker of the evening and her talk was appropriate to the occasion.

PULLMAN NINE TO BREAK IN NEW UNIFORMS

Paul Huston's Pullman champs will don their natty new uniforms next Sunday afternoon at the first street ball park to play the Oakland Colored Giants. The new "unies" are white with navy blue trimmings and caps to match, with a large "P" on the left breast. They give the champs quite a "big league" appearance, and the boys are stepping out Sunday to make appearances good in action.

In meeting the colored giants the Pullmans will be taking on a classy aggregation. As the school record shows 10 games won and only 2 lost by the visitors, one of these being a 2-1 eleven inning contest at Modesto. Last Sunday they took the Cramer All-Stars of Berkeley to a 10-0 cleaning, and they propose to plaster a large dark spot on those new Pullman suits.

Manager Huston has developed a promising twirler in former third baseman Lawson, and the big boy will hook up with Carl "Iron Man" Kamb and LaCharustra, a newcomer from Bakersfield, in the Old Fields League. McElroy will catch "nuf" said, Jimmy Roberts, former St. Mary's College outfielder, Lefty Gammino, first baseman from San Francisco, and third baseman Barbell, a Richmond high school star, are new players on the Pullman team.

The Oakland Giants will use Smith and Reed, and before the game Manager Kitchin will put on a comedy demonstration of shadow baseball with slow motion plays and other stunts to entertain the fans. The colored boys are noted for their pep and fun making antics.

The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 p.m.

Watson & Robertson Win in Indiana Vote

(By Universal Service)
INDIANAPOLIS, May 4.—Scattering returns from today's Indiana primaries mostly from the cities indicate the nomination of Senator James E. Watson and Arthur H. Robertson by a comparatively large majority.

Unless the rural vote which is up in arms over the failure of the national advisory to do something for the farmers furnishes a big upset Watson's majority is indicated in the neighborhood of 100,000.

Robertson on the basis of the returns at hand probably will have a clear majority over his four opponents obtaining the necessity of the nomination being made by the state convention of June 3.

No Action Taken On Lenglen Tour

(By Universal Service)
NEW YORK, May 4.—The advisory committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association decided today that no action would be taken towards sanctioning a series of exhibition games in the United States by Mile. Lenglen until word had been received from the French Tennis Federation.

MAIN-EVENTERS ARE PREPARED FOR BIG FIGHT

Eddie Sylvester and Frankie Farron, rival lightweights, are tapering off training today and will be fit as the proverbial fiddle, physically, for their encounter in the main event of The Richmond Athletic club's boxing show Friday evening.

Both Farron and Sylvester have trained with blood in their eyes for this fight, and besides wanting to win this bout for professional reasons, both boys have personal reasons for wanting to lay the other gentleman in the briefest time possible after they climb through the ropes Friday night.

Richmond boxing fans can rest assured that they will surely see a fight, in capital letters, when Eddie Sylvester and Frankie Farron start off on their 6 round journey.

"Far be it from me to knock a fellow boxer," Farron told Matchmaker Harry Eagles, last Monday, "but this guy Sylvester thinks that he is better than I am, and he's been talking around to that effect. I'll break his doggone neck for him when I get him in that Richmond ring Friday night."

Sylvester laughed when informed what Farron said about him "Farren and I used to be good friends once" said Eddie "But he thinks that there is nobody else as good as Frank Farron. Well, I'll show him that Eddie Sylvester is a lot better, when I climb through those ropes Friday."

Young Pancho Villa, Oakland flyweight, will oppose Paddy Wheeler in the six round semi-final. This bout will prove to be one of the fastest of the evening. Wheeler, a good boxer is substituting for DeVera who is sick.

Jimmy West of Oakland is slated to box Joe Limas of El Cerrito but the temperamental Limas informed himself and unless he can give a good reason to the boxing commission for non-appearance he will be barred from appearing in any ring contest for a long while. A good substitute will take his place if he refuses to go on.

Ivan Kid Morgan, local lightweight vs. Young Salisido, also of Richmond. Caesar Bertone vs. Danny Garcia round out the card.

Stork Treating Zoo Excellent

(By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, May 4.—There is a lot of "stork" gossip going on at the Bronx Park Zoo these spring days and if one can understand the chatter he would conclude that the stork and Dr. Dimmy "boss of the Zoo" are scheduled for a busy season.

The animals have a lot to talk about, for, like humans, they are quite clever at divining each other's family affairs.

If you become friendly enough with any of them they will give you confidential information like this:

There will be a dozen kinds of little new fauns capering over the green.

More than half a dozen little buffaloes are expected in the near future.

Numerous lambs and kids including the Himalaya Tahn, Sardinian Mouflon and Barbary Wild Sheep will soon get their first welcome into the big world.

At least fifty youngsters are expected to swell the population of the parrot dog town.

Careful preparations are being made for additions to the monkey tribe.

Occupants of the lion and tiger cages expect increases in their families.

The birds are setting on pretty eggs of various sizes and colors. And a baby zebra is also predicted.

The kangaroo family was the first to experience the glory of Spring. Mother Kangaroo hops proudly around the lot now with soft offspring snuggling in her warm pouch.

But with all this joy there is a note of sadness. The coming babies will not long remain at Bronx Park. Negotiations have already been opened to trade several of them off to out of town zoos in exchange for other animals.

Tennis Juveniles Have Short Meet

Because of the bad weather, but a short meeting of the juveniles of the Richmond tennis club was held yesterday. At this time it was decided that the juveniles will meet on the first Tuesday of every month and at the next meeting officers will be elected. Dues for the members were collected yesterday.

Miss Ruth Hesbol, who is assisted by Herbert L. Hunn, in the coaching of the juveniles, has announced that a good deal of talent has been shown by the local boys and girls.

For the experienced players a series of ladder tournaments have been arranged, while the less experienced members are given lessons by the coaches.

Baseball Season Starts Today

When the fans of Richmond saw the rain gently splatter the earth yesterday—they were peeved, yea—verily peeved; for with the rain they thought they had lost all chances of seeing the Meck-nicks and All Standards meet today for the first game of the season. But the rain decides to fall today the game will be played because the "H's" but of wetness that fell last night will do the ground good, "Chick" Autry, a newcomer in baseball circles, announced yesterday.

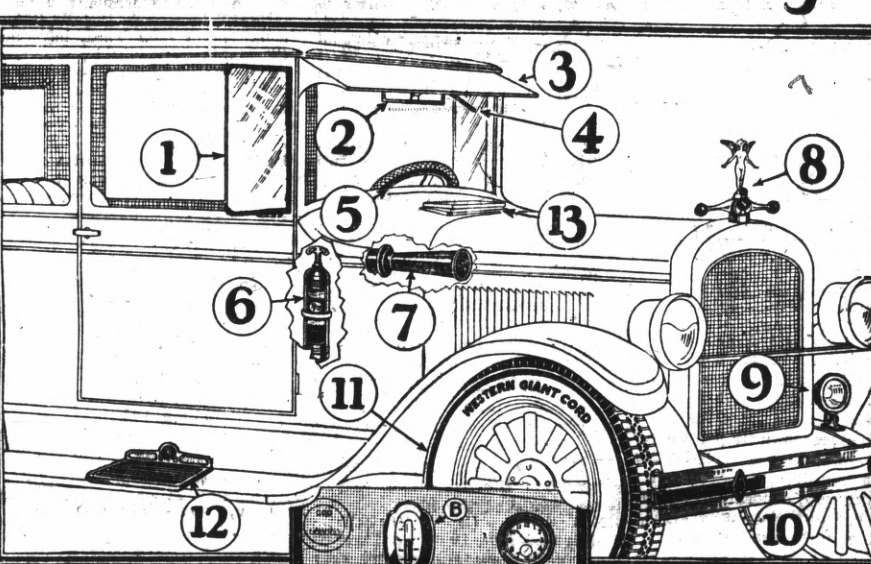

Thank the fates for that—the fans are yearning to sit in the bleachers once more and listen to the swat of the ball and the prayers of the team to their pitcher.

Yes baseball season will start today—starting with a bang and a whoop. Fans—be on hand.

Coolidge Lauds Sec. Mellon for Debt Settlements

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, May 4.—(By telegraph) The settlement of America's financial transaction between governments in the history of the world, President Coolidge believes that the public owes a debt of gratitude to the financial genius of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and to the work of the American debt funding commission.

The President's views were stated in his behalf at the White House while Senate opponents were marshaling their strength to make an aggressive attack upon the French pact—last of the big settlements completed for ratification by Congress.

President Coolidge noted to White House visitors that the settlements already made total $11,500,000,000 in principal, and interest in excess of $10,000,000,000, or a grand total of $22,500,000,000. When the major part of these settlements impresses itself upon the people they will regard the work with a great deal of satisfaction, President Coolidge believes.

The settlements will produce a steady flow of money into the United States treasury, he observed, and will aid greatly in strengthening and stabilizing economic conditions the world over.

Some of the settlements he regards as liberal, but on the whole he believes they were just.

President Coolidge desires to remind the country that the American debt commission was drawn from both parties, that it included three members of the cabinet, members of both Senate and House, and men from outside the public service.

Great as was the contribution of the members of the commission, the settlements were brought about by the confidence in the financial judgment of Chairman Mellon both by the people of this country and the financial judgment of the foreign governments, President Coolidge believes. Without that confidence, the President believes, it would have been impossible to receive such strong support for all the settlements, including the French pact.

Despite President Coolidge's optimism over the outcome, Senators Borah and Reed and some of the Democrats expect the French agreement will result in a bitterly prolonged session of Congress with the ultimate result in doubt.

Some of them profess to see in it a French motive to make small payments for a few years to come in order that France can borrow up to $500,000,000 in this country.

They are resentful, also, over France's refusal of a request to call the Parliament into special session in order that the debt agreement may be ratified there before action is taken by the Senate here.

Woman Says She Made Booze by The Law of God

(By Universal Service)
SEATTLE, Wash., May 4.—Mrs. Joe Spock, a recent arrival from Germany, was haled into court here recently on the charge of brewing beer in her home, for her own personal use.

Her attorney, in an eloquent plea, quoted the Bible, stressing the story of the transformation of water into wine, holding that his client should not be punished for simply obeying the word of God.

Judge C. C. Dalton, before whom the case was tried, was inclined to the belief of the woman's attorney, but nevertheless he fined Mrs. Spock ten dollars.

"I am a man-made judge, appointed under man-made laws, and were I to follow the Holy Writ in this instance I would be held in contempt of the law of the land, would be subject to summary dismissal and even to imprisonment," explained Judge Dalton.

Both Sides Refuse To Give Way

looking toward peace until the general strike is called off.

The trades union congress, after remaining in continuous session all day, adjourned at six o'clock until Wednesday at 5 p. m.

The house of commons recessed at 5:30 without mentioning the industrial or political crisis, except that former Premier Ramsay MacDonald announced that the labor party will take no further part in the general business of the house until the strike is settled.

The House of Lords discussed the strike, with former Premier, now the Earl of Oxford and Asquith, declaring that the "general strike is aimed at the very vitals of the whole community, and is the cruelest and most indiscriminating form of warfare."

Government officials began tonight to conjecture as to the length of the strike and its outcome, the consensus appearing to be that the crisis will arrive at next week-end when the funds of the unions begin to dwindle and the families of the strikers begin to suffer from hunger.

King George interested himself keenly in the progress of the dispute and is remaining at Buckingham Palace. The Prince of Wales, who was holidaying at Biarritz, was summoned home by telegraph and arrived at 8:15 tonight by air plane.

In order that under no circumstances any revolutionary movement may gain headway, the government has prepared and delivered to Scotland Yard warrants for the arrest of every leading Communist, and as soon as one of them makes the first sign of sedition, he will be taken into custody for the duration of the strike. The arrest of Shapurji Saklatvala was the first to be made under this program and he was held in bonds to keep the peace after promising not to indulge in any public talking.

Mild disorders marking the first day of the strike added to the determination of the government to maintain order at all hazards, and orders were sent to Scotland Yard to add 100,000 men to the active lists.

A threatening crowd gathered outside the plant of the Morning Post, where the government's newspaper, "The British Gazette," is being printed. The composers inside the plant are being guarded by more than one hundred armed Scotland Yard detectives.

El Cerrito Plans
Move to Lower
Insurance Rates

According to Trustee Phil A. Lee, of El Cerrito, there are at the present time a number of 40 gallons drums of gasoline kept by the residents of El Cerrito above ground, which is a great fire hazard to the city, and that the city ought to pass an ordinance prohibiting the storage of gasoline in more than one or two lots.

Chairman Charles Zimmerman informed the board that a representative of the board of fire underwriters had been to see him and that the fire underwriters had a number of suggested changes in the ordinances for fire prevention which would lower the fire insurance rate; and these will be presented to the trustees as soon as a survey is made of the city.

Novel Test for City Employees
Made by Seattle

(By Universal Service)
SEATTLE, Wash., May 4.—Quite the most unusual examination of applicants for laboring jobs for city of Seattle is under way here this month.

The examinations largely concern matter rather than mind. If the applicant can spell his name, give his age and prove that he can hear and see normally, he is deemed ready to go on to the more exacting tests.

The candidate is then invited to proceed to a gravel pile, where he finds an assorted collection of shovels. He is told to choose one and, when the signal is given, begins to throw the gravel over a six-foot fence, behind which is concealed a wheelbarrow. When the designated pile has been shoveled over, the "teacher" examines the contents of the "barrow" and if the applicant is fairly accurate, he will be allowed to take another wheelbarrow test. This consists of trundling the barrow, loaded with three seventy-five pound sacks of sand, for a distance of a block. If the candidate does this without undue faltering, he is considered a likely worker and will be given a job at the first opportunity.

Cranning for such an examination, it was pointed out, is entirely free from the mental strain usually connected with such affairs, but sore backs and strained muscles can well be expected.
